Bruin Beauties Sprung On Kids

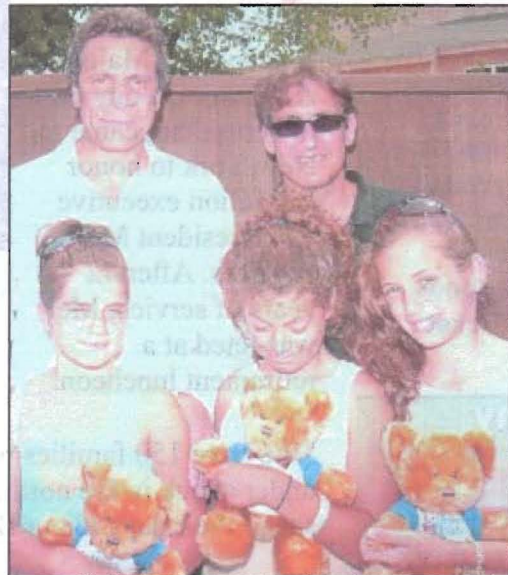

MANY children laid up in hospitals have found a new friend to relieve their isolation – a teddy bear. Actually the new friend is Joseph Sprung whose mission is to bring happiness to children fighting illness and boredom.

A financial guru, Joe created Bears 4 Kids four years ago with a personal mission to enrich children's lives with a therapeutic furry bear. What child doesn't love a teddy?

In June Joe brought a wagon-load of these plush toys to the Children's National Medical Center in Washington, DC. Sponsored by the International Economy Magazine, Joe handed out more than 60 bears to children suffering with cancer.

In July Joe hosted two dozen foster children and volunteers from Ohel Children's Home at a sumptuous barbecue at his Westhampton Beach digs.

Ohel serves people with developmental and psychiatric disabilities. Led by Ohel president Moishe Hellman, the kids jumped into the swimming pool, lifted rackets on the tennis court, and feasted on hot dogs and steaks (with all the trimmings) from the outdoor grill.
